CHAPTER XIV.

MISS DREW'S cotillion was not graced by the presence of Montgomery Brewster. It is true he received an eleventh hour invitation and a very cold and difficult little note of apology, but he maintained heroically the air of disdain that had succeeded the first sharp pangs of disappointment. Colonel Drew, in whose good graces Monty had firmly established himself, was not quite guiltless of usurping the role of dictator in the effort to patch up a truce. A few nights before the cotillion, when Barbara told him that Herbert Alling was to lead, he exclusively expressed surprise. "Why not Monty Brewster, Rabs?" he demanded.

"Mr. Brewster is not coming," she responded calmly.

"Going to be out of town?"

"I'm sure I do not know," stily.

"What's this?"

"He has not been asked, father." Miss Drew was not in good humor.

"Not asked?" said the colonel in amazement. "It's ridiculous, Rabs. Send him an invitation at once."

"This is my dance, father, and I don't want to ask Mr. Brewster."

The colonel sank back in his chair and struggled to overcome his anger. He knew that Barbara had inherited his willfulness and had long since discovered that it was best to treat her with tact.

"I thought you and he were"—But the colonel's supply of tact was exhausted.

"We were," in a moment of absent-mindedness "but it's all over," said Barbara.

"Why, child, there wouldn't have been a cotillion if it hadn't been for"—But the colonel remembered his promise to Monty and checked himself just in time. "I—I mean there will not be any party if Montgomery Brewster is not asked. That is all I care to say on the subject." And he stamped out of the room.

Barbara wept copiously after her father had gone, but she realized that his will was law and that Monty must be invited. "I will send an invitation," she said to herself, "but if Mr. Brewster comes after he has read it I shall be surprised."

Montgomery, however, did not receive the note in the spirit in which it had been sent. He only saw in it a ray of hope that Barbara was relenting and was jubilant at the prospect of a reconciliation. The next Sunday he sought an interview with Miss Drew, but she received him with icy reserve. If he had thought to punish her by staying away it was evident that she felt equally responsible for a great deal of misery on his part. Both had been more or less unhappy, and both were resentfully obstinate. Brewster felt hurt and insulted, while she felt that he had imposed upon her disgrace.

A NOTRE DAME LADY'S APPEAL.

To all knowing sufferers of rheumatism, whether muscular or of the joints, sciatica, lumbago, backache, pains in the kidneys or neuralgia pains, to write to her for a home treatment which has repeatedly cured all of these tortures. She feels it her duty to send it to all sufferers FREE. You cure yourself at home as thousands will testify—no change of climate being necessary. This simple discovery banishes uric acid from the blood, loosens the stiffened joints, purifies the blood, and brightens the eyes, giving elasticity and tone to the whole system. If the above interests you, for proof address Mrs. M. Summers, Box B, Notre Dame, Ind.

the girl silent and crushed, but with a gleam in her eyes that was not altogether to be concealed. The story had touched her more deeply than she would willingly confess. It was something to know that Monty Brewster could do a thing like that and would do it for her. The exultant smile which it brought to her lips could only be made to disappear by reminding herself sharply of his recent arrogance. Her anger, she found, was a plant which needed careful cultivation.

It was in a somewhat chastened mood that she started a few days later for a dinner at the DeMilles'. As she entered in her sweeping golden gown the sight of Monty Brewster at the other end of the room gave her a flutter at the heart, but it was an agitation that was very carefully concealed. Brewster was certainly unconscious of it. To him the position of guest was like a disguise, and he was pleased at the prospect of letting himself go under the mask without responsibility. But it took on a different color when the butler handed him a card which signified that he was to take Miss Drew in to dinner. Hastily seeking out the hostess, he endeavored to convey to her the impossibility of the situation.

"I hope you won't misunderstand me," he said. "But is it too late to change my place at the table?"

"It isn't conventional, I know, Monty. Society's chief aim is to separate engaged couples at dinner," said Mrs. Dan, with a laugh. "It would be positively compromising if a man and his wife sat together."

Dinner was announced before Monty could utter another word, and as she led him over to Barbara she said: "Behold a generous hostess who gives up the best man in the crowd so that he and some one else may have a happy time. I leave it to you, Barbara, if that isn't the test of friendship."

For a moment the two riveted their eyes on the floor; then the humor of the situation came to Monty.

"I did not know that we were supposed to do Gibson tableaux tonight," he said dryly as he proffered his arm.

"I don't understand." And Barbara's curiosity overcame her determination not to speak.

"Don't you remember the picture of the man who was called upon to take his late fiancée out to dinner?"

The awful silence with which this remark was received put an end to further efforts at humor.

The dinner was probably the most painful experience in their lives. Barbara had come to it softened and ready to meet him halfway. The right kind of humility in Monty would have found her plastic. But she had very definite and rigid ideas of his duty in the premises, and Monty was too simple minded to seem to suffer and much too flippant to understand. It was plain to each that the other did not expect to talk, but they both realized that they owed a duty to appearances and to their hostess. Through two courses at least there was dead silence between them. It seemed as though every eye in the room were on them and every mind were speculating. At last in sheer desperation Barbara turned to him with the first smile he had seen on her face in days. There was no smile in her eyes, however, and Monty understood.

"We might at least give out the impression that we are friends," she said quietly.

"More easily said than done," he responded gloomily.

"They are all looking at us and wondering."

"I don't blame them."

"We owe something to Mrs. Dan, I think."

"I know."

Barbara uttered some inanity whenever she caught any one looking in their direction, but Brewster seemed not to hear. At length he cut short some remark of hers about the weather.

"What nonsense this is, Barbara," he said. "With any one else I would chuck the whole game, but with you it is different. I don't know what I have done, but I am sorry. I hope you'll forgive me."

"Your assurance is amusing, to say the least."

"But I am sure—I know this quarrel is something we'll laugh over. You keep forgetting that we are going to be married some day."

A new light came into Barbara's eyes. "You forget that my consent may be necessary," she said.

"You will be perfectly willing when the time comes. I am still in the light and eventually you will come to my way of thinking."

"Oh! I see it now," said Barbara, and her blood was up. "You mean to force me to it. What you did for father."

Brewster glowered at her, thinking that he had misunderstood. "What do you mean?" he said.

"He has told me all about that wretched bank business. But poor father thought you quite disinterested. He did not see the little game behind your melodrama. He would have torn up your check on the instant if he had suspected you were trying to buy his daughter."

"Does your father believe that?" asked Brewster.

"No, but I see it all now. His persistence and yours—you were not slow to grasp the opportunity he offered."

"Stop, Miss Drew. Monty commanded. His voice had changed, and she had never before seen that look in his eyes. "You need have no fear that I will trouble you again."

Temporary quarters ashore were arranged for the wounded, and sixty citizens volunteered and hurried in launches to the relief of those on the ill-fated ship. Some of the volunteers were unable to stand the sickening sight which met their gaze on the Bennington. As fast as the wounded could be removed they were hurried to the hospitals.

THE BOILER LETS GO

Half a Hundred United States Sailors Blown Into Eternity When Dread Shock Came.

Scores of Men Were Grievously Injured, Many of Whom Will Swell the Death List.

One of the Worst Accidents in History of American Navy Occurs in San Diego Harbor.

San Diego, Cal., July 22.—Thirty-nine dead bodies are lying at morgues, on piers and on a deck of a ruined vessel of the United States navy; scores of men are lying grievously or painfully injured in sanitariums and hospitals, and fifteen sailors are missing and probably have found death in the waters of the harbor as a result of an explosion of a boiler on board the United States gunboat Bennington.

The Bennington at the time of the accident was lying in the stream just off the commercial wharf at the foot of H street. The warship had received orders from the navy department at Washington to sail for Port Hartford, where she was to meet the monitor Wyoming and convey the vessel to Mare Island navy yard. Steam was up and everything was in readiness for sailing, when suddenly and without warning whatever, the starboard forward boiler exploded with a deafening roar. The explosion was terrific. People standing on the shore saw a huge cloud of white steam rise above the Bennington. Columns of water were hurled into the air and for a distance of nearly twice the height of the spars of the vessel.

It was immediately apparent that an awful disaster of some kind had happened on board the warship. The ferryboat Romona was coming across the bay at the time of the accident. Captain Bertelsen of the Romona immediately gave orders to change the course of the boat, and instead of continuing his trip to the San Diego side of the bay, hurried to the side of the stricken warship. Tugs, launches and other water craft which were near the scene at the time also rushed to the assistance of the Bennington and endeavored to lend every assistance possible.

By the time the Romona had arrived many of the sailors of the Bennington who had jumped into the bay to escape the scalding steam had been rescued and the removal of the wounded, which already had been commenced, was being conducted in perfect order. The crews of the local craft present lent yeoman aid in picking up the wounded sailors and transferring them to the shore.

At the time of the accident Commander Lucien Young and Surgeon F. E. Peck were on shore. The two officers, as soon as they learned of the disaster, hurried to the water front, where Commander Young immediately took charge.

On board the Bennington were presented terrible scenes. The force of the explosion had torn a great hole in the starboard side of the ship and the vessel was already commencing to list. A section of the upper deck was carried away from stem to stern. Blood and wreckage were distributed over the entire ship, the after cabin and the vicinity of the ship adjacent to the exploded boiler resembling a charnel house. Over it all hung the great cloud of white smoke.

A dozen or fifteen were blown overboard by the force of the terrific explosion. Persons who were looking at the Bennington when the disaster occurred say they saw human bodies hurled over a hundred feet upward. The air was black with smoke which enveloped the ship. When it cleared away only a few men could be seen on the decks, while a number were floundering in the water. A boat was lowered from the vessel's side and most of them were picked up and taken on board.

The shock of the explosion penetrated every section of the ship, blood and ashes being found as far as the stern of the captain's cabin. Portions of the upper deck were carried away and great damage was done in all sections. The bodies of many of the men taken from the wrecked interior of the ship were mutilated almost beyond recognition. The faces of many were covered with blood and ashes. Commander Young as soon as he reached the ship gave orders that the airtight compartments be closed to prevent the listing ship sinking, and that the magazines be flooded to avert further explosions.

Temporary quarters ashore were arranged for the wounded, and sixty citizens volunteered and hurried in launches to the relief of those on the ill-fated ship. Some of the volunteers were unable to stand the sickening sight which met their gaze on the Bennington. As fast as the wounded could be removed they were hurried to the hospitals.

ATTRACTIVE PROGRAM

Has Been Arranged by the Winona Management for the Entertainment of the Pencil Pushers.

Editorial Party Will Rendezvous at Indianapolis and Accept Big Four's Generous Courtesy.

Indianapolis, July 22.—The annual midsummer outing of the Indiana Republican Editorial association will be held at Winona Lake next week, opening Tuesday and continuing through the week. It promises to be one of the most enjoyable sessions the editors have held. Harry Smith of Greencastle, secretary of the association, has written the management of the assembly grounds that 150 members have already signified their intention of attending, and more than 200 are confidently expected.

The meeting will attract a large number of party leaders and candidates. The latter are especially anxious to "get next" to the editors, as the campaign for places on the state ticket next year is now opening. It is understood that Senator James A. Hemenway and several members of congress will be among the guests of honor, and Vice President Fairbanks may spend a day or two with the editors, as he has frequently attended their gatherings.

An attractive program has been promised for their entertainment. With its customary liberality the Big Four road has offered free transportation to the editors from here. The editors and their families will rendezvous at the Spencer House here and leave for Winona at 11 a. m., Tuesday, accepting the generous courtesy of the Big Four Railway company.

LAW EVADED AT RICHMOND

Police Board Determined to Close Saloons on Sunday.

Richmond, Ind., July 22.—According to the statement made by one of the members of the board of metropolitan police commissioners of Richmond, the present police force must show its ability to keep the saloons in Richmond or there will be changes made. Despite the fact that the impression has prevailed that Richmond's saloons have been displaying much respect for the Sunday closing law since the recent big raid, it is said that last Sunday many saloons were open and boldly doing business. It is understood that extra precautions are to be taken tomorrow to prevent saloons from opening. Traveling man say that Richmond is the "tightest" city in the gas belt region of Indiana, and are wondering what it will be when the police board gets through.

Sought Safety, Found Death.

Frankfort, Ind., July 22.—John P. Hough, who for eighteen months had been a fireman on the Clover Leaf railroad, was instantly killed by a switch engine in the yards here. In response to the request of his mother to quit railroading he tendered his resignation to the company and, stepping outside of the general office building sat down on the rail to wait for his train for home. He evidently fell asleep, for a few minutes later a switch engine ran down to the place where he was sitting and stopped with the wheels directly on his body.

Run Over by Reaper.

Thornstown, Ind., July 22.—James W. Moore, living west of town, was seriously hurt by a team that was attached to a binder running away. The horses stepped into a puny pees' nest. Mr. Moore was thrown in front of the machine. The left forearm was half cut off, there were two deep cuts on the hips, and a long slash in his thigh, in addition to a number of smaller cuts. His condition is critical, though doctors think he will recover.

Death in Live Wire.

Goshen, Ind., July 22.—While standing on a nonconducting board testing an arc lamp, Daniel Gripe grasped an incandescent lamp in one hand and formed a circuit which caused instant death. Gripe was electrician at the city lighting plant here and was a man of high standing.

Lighted Fire With Coal Oil.

Fort Wayne, Ind., July 22.—Rose Vachon, daughter of Thomas J. Vachon, was terribly burned by an explosion of coal oil as she lighted a fire in the kitchen stove. Her sister rescued her in time to prevent immediate death.

Worry and Overwork.

Logansport, Ind., July 22.—William D. Wendling, a well-known Tipton township farmer, who went insane from overwork and worry over financial reverses, committed suicide at his home north of Walton by hanging.

INTERURBAN PLANS

Indianapolis, July 22.—Charles L. Henry, president of the Indianapolis & Cincinnati Traction company, said today that the company will probably within the next week begin extensions of its lines from Shelbyville to Greensburg and from Rushville to Connersville. The company may eventually have two routes to Cincinnati if the plan of extensions is continued.

Wouldn't Renew His Bond.

Topeka, Kan., July 22.—Governor Hoch has declared the office of state treasurer now held by J. J. Kelly, vacant because of Kelly's refusal to give a bond, his old bond being involved in the recent failure of C. J. Devlin. Governor Hoch offered the position of state treasurer to R. M. Allen, but the latter declined. He then offered the position to Charles W. Hull of Kirwin, who is considering it.

LOUISVILLE is getting strict. The city council there has adopted an ordinance that saloons in Louisville must be closed from 1 a. m. to 5 a. m. Just think of it. For four long hours out of twenty-four the people must go without anything to drink.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT will be known in history for several things. Among them will be his relations to the Panama canal, but if he succeeds in bringing about peace between Russia and Japan there will be no other one thing in his administration, whatever he may achieve, that will make a brighter page either in his own biography or in the history of this day.

A YOUNG man is setting out in life to make a name and to acquire a competence for himself. He seeks employment; he finds it. He wants to hold that position until he can obtain a better one. The only chance for him to get a better one in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred is to show that he is capable in the one that he now holds. It is to his own interest then that he demonstrate his capability. He can't do this unless he is prompt, industrious and careful. It is to his interest to display these qualities and make his services of real value to his employer.

New Church Plans.

Architect John A. Carter has completed and delivered the plans for the new Holiness Christian church to be built here this season. The plans show a beautiful and nicely arranged building. The exterior dimensions are 40 by 70 feet. The auditorium will be large and will be well lighted and heated by a furnace. Classrooms and a reception room are also provided for. There will be a large basement and other conveniences that go with a modern church building. The building will face on Indianapolis avenue. The residence on the lot is now being moved off and bids will be received for the new house of worship in the near future.

House Party Broken.

Some of the guests of the house party given by John Peters at his cabin returned to Seymour today, having been out by the Lake since Wednesday. Besides the members of the party others went from town to spend the evenings with the merry crowd. There were about thirty at the cabin all the time, while the number was often very much increased and all are greatly appreciative of the excellent time afforded them. There will be a crowd there over Sunday.

Special Sales.

The special sales of dry goods that have been so widely advertised through these columns helped to bring a big crowd of shoppers to town today. Judicious advertising always pays big money to the advertiser. More merchants should buy space in the newspapers and thereby help to increase the number of shoppers who come this way to buy their goods.

Entertained.

At her home on west Second street last evening Miss Addie Reynolds pleasantly entertained a number of young people, complimentary to Miss Julia Long, of Charlestown, and Miss Kate Mitchell, of Indianapolis. The evening was very pleasantly spent with games and music. Refreshments were served and the pleasure continued until a late hour. Miss Long returned this morning to her home.

JUDGE BUSKIRK

Orders Witnesses to Leave Revolvers at Home.

The trial of Henry Tow charged with the murder of James Route in Lawrence county June 4, 1904, has been on trial before Judge Buskirk at Paoli the past few days. The case was venued from Lawrence county and many witnesses were summoned and remained through the trial.

When the case was ready for argument the judge excused the witnesses and told them they could return to their homes in Lawrence county but must return Monday when the case of David Beasley, also charged with murder, would be called. In excusing them Judge Buskirk said: "The witnesses may now return to their homes and when they report again Monday they must come without their guns."

It is understood that many of the Lawrence witnesses went on the witness stand with revolvers in their pockets. Intense bitterness exists between the factions represented at this trial and it would not have been surprising if more trouble had been started at the trial. Paoli saloon men were cautioned by the court not to sell liquor to any of the Lawrence county witnesses.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Jeffries who reside on Vine street.

The melons are in fine condition and many nutmegs are being shipped.

CONFIDENT OF VICTORY

Indianapolis Republicans See but One Conclusion in Coming Event.

Indianapolis, July 22.—Charles A. Bookwalter, Republican candidate for mayor, has returned from an outing at Lake Wauwassee, entirely recuperated from the effects of his campaign prior to the recent primaries. He says that he will open his campaign about the first of September. The campaign will begin later this time, owing to the change in the election law, which provides that the election shall be held in November, the same as general elections. Bookwalter expressed himself as being confident that the Republican ticket will be elected. He is expected to make the greatest fight of his life, which in view of his record as a campaigner, will mean that the voters will be treated to a fine and exciting exhibition. A lot of even money is now being offered that Bookwalter will win and it would not be surprising if he should be a two-to-one favorite a week before the election.

The fact that the report for the first half of the present year shows a substantial increase over the first six months' business of the office in 1904, is very gratifying to Secretary of State Dan Storms and his deputy, Frank I. Grubbs. It was the general impression for some reason that there was not so much new business among the corporations, but the fees from that source were larger than during the corresponding period of the preceding year. Mr. Grubbs says that the big fee of the Vandallia Railroad company into which several contributory lines of the Pennsylvania were merged, helped to bring up the record to the high point. There were several substantial increases of capital stock among the traction companies, and the general line of new business was good. It may be noted, however, from the report that there were fewer oil companies organized than during the preceding year, which may be accounted for by the fact that prices fixed by the Standard are considerably lower and there has not been so much drilling in new territory. The report may be regarded as a good barometer of the general business conditions of the state.

The Pure Seed and Plant Company of America, capital $250,000, has filed articles of incorporation with Secretary of State Storms. It is one of the unique organizations of the present year, the primary object being to eradicate a "national curse—harmful weeds." The association is to try to obtain the enactment of laws against weeds and to have them enforced. It is not evident from the articles just how the association expects to proceed with its gigantic undertaking, as it is pointed out that a fight against weeds is against one of the greatest armies in the world. "To eradicate weeds from the farms of America" is one of the statements regarding the object of the association. J. E. Everett of this city, head of the American Society of Equity, which has been trying to secure dollar wheat for the farmers, is one of the leading spirits of the association, which will have headquarters in Indianapolis.

One Dollar Saved Represents Ten Dollars Earned.

The average man does not save to exceed ten per cent of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in living expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he cannot be too careful about unnecessary expenses. Very often a few cents properly invested, like buying seeds for his garden, will save several dollars outlay later on. It is the same in buying Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but a few cents, and a bottle of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars. For sale by C. W. Milhous.

BARN STRUCK.

Lightning Causes a Loss of One Thousand Dollars.

Thursday afternoon during the rain and thunder storm lightning struck
William Forgy's barn near Pleasant Grove and burned it to the ground.

The barn was filled with hay and grain all of which was lost. What farm implements and other machinery that were within were also burned.
There were no horses or stock in the barn at the time.

The total loss is not less than $1000.
There was no insurance on any of the property burned.

Mr. Forgy was between his house and barn when the lightning struck and received something of a shock, causing him to return to the house.
The lightning was very keen in that vicinity Thursday afternoon.

Abbott Surrenders.

Charles Abbott, who is charged with dealing William Cox a blow on the head fracturing his skull and resulting in his death two weeks later, surrendered himself to Prosecutor Murphy at Scottsburg and was taken to jail at Brownstown Friday. Abbott has been evading the officers ever since the death of William Cox.
When he was located at one time an attempt was made to arrest him but he defied the officer and being armed was able to stand him off. Finally he seems to have concluded that it was useless to try to get away or to longer keep in hiding. He sent Prosecutor Murphy word to meet him at Scotts-burg and accompany him to jail which was done. Abbott will not say much but protests that he did not strike the blow that resulted in William Cox's death. Abbott and Cox had trouble in a saloon at Crothersville about seven weeks ago and came to blows
after they stepped on the outside.

At 12:40 this noon the alarm was sounded and the fire department called to the Seymour Woolen Mills, where a fire was in progress in the waste house. Spontaneous combustion was the cause of the fire, which was soon extinguished by the electric sprinklers which are all over the building. No damage was done by fire, but everything was soaked by the sprinklers.
The flames were put out without the aid of the fire department.
